I am laughing out loud! Just so you know, I was so terrified of the exact same thing that ended up screwing up my signature! And that is a big no-no. So I ended up going to the Annex and they had me put a slash and write it again (I had signed middle initial and was supposed to spell out middle name bc that is how it is on my registration). I don't know if they would have rejected it for that but was taking no chances. And then I left it with the registration office - and it still isn't showing as received on my voter page. It's insane but voting has truly become one of the most anxiety provoking American activities. And it should NOT be that way.

But to answer your question, you can leave blanks, they are called undervotes and will not cause your ballot to be rejected. Stray marks or not filling in the bubble completely - those can cause your ballot to reject. Or they can challenge your signature. You should be perfectly fine as long as you meet that criteria. Once you drop your ballots off start checking my voter page. If your ballot does get rejected for some reason it will show that there and you will have the opportunity to "cure" your ballot, meaning you can go where ever they tell you and fix whatever you did wrong. It is very unlikely you did anything wrong. I still worry we will get screwed here bc of the machines but I don't think they will be rejecting ballots for simple things. But who knows. It is terrible to have so little faith but it has been earned.

Thanks for being careful!

Preparing to "drop" ballots this week and have one silly question that I'm embarrassed to ask. At 61, you'd think I'd know the right answer but I want to ENSURE that my mail-in ballot is FULLY ACCEPTED and not discarded. There are a handful of Republican incumbents running without opposition. It appears on the ballot that I must "choose one" or my only other option is to WRITE IN the name of someone in lieu of the incumbent. I take it that NOT making a choice could get my ballot rejected, correct? If I WRITE IN Bozo the Clown, Mickey Mouse or Bugs Bunny, would that get me bumped as well? Can you tell that I absolutely do not want to be forced to vote for a Republican in any way, shape or form? Do you have any insights on this that you can share?

I can only imagine how disappointed you are...please know that the average citizen is completely and utterly disgusted with the myriad of attempts to keep people from voting in this election and/or doing everything in their power to reject any ballots presented. I, personally, appreciate everything you have done to help shine a light on how screwed up things are within our own State.

 Any drop box in Alpharetta will be fine for derek's.

The judge acknowledged the problems with the new ballot marking devices but ruled against us bc of case law that says nothing can be done this close to an election. Demoralizing.

Glad you are voting absentee.

I have Derek's ballot in my possession as well as the ballots for Jim and me. Will release them under your direction. I know where the "official" ballot box is located in Forsyth County and will deposit Derek's the one you deem most appropriate to ensure that his vote is counted.
